

Compensation of American Chemical Society (ACS) Officers and Key Employees - A Guide for ACS Members and the General Public

The world's largest scientific society is committed to providing its members and the public with information about the compensation paid to its officers and key executives.

ACS is a not-for-profit organization and, as such, is required to file an informational return called the "Form 990" with the Internal Revenue Service. Included on the Form 990 is compensation paid to "officers and key employees" of the Society as well as to the five highest compensated employees other than officers and key employees. A public disclosure copy of the ACS 2022 Form 990, Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax, is available on the ACS public website, with compensation information included in Schedule J of the Form 990. The information below is provided as additional explanation regarding the compensation reported on Schedule J.

The information reported on Schedule J of the ACS 2022 Form 990 reflects the fact that ACS is a large and complex organization. The Society's total revenues in 2022 were $711 million. ACS has a membership of over 173,000 chemists and chemical engineers, over 2,000 employees, and assets of over 1.71 billion. In addition to the Society's broad array of member programs, the ACS Publications Division and CAS are the leading providers of the highest quality chemical information to the worldwide scientific and engineering communities.

The ACS Board of Directors determines the salaries and performance compensation (incentive pay) of Society officers and reviews and approves recommendations from the Chief Executive Officer for salaries and performance compensation of other senior management employees. The Society's executive compensation programs are designed, administered, and monitored to:

- Ensure competitiveness, equity, and fairness
- Attract and retain qualified staff
- Support the continued success of ACS

Total cash compensation for ACS's executive positions is benchmarked using published survey data against executive positions in comparable for-profit and not-for-profit organizations, including membership organizations. These positions have been benchmarked regularly by independent compensation consulting firms (i.e., KPMG, Quatt Associates, Aon, Mercer, and Willis Towers Watson). The Society's goal is to ensure it neither leads the market nor lags behind it. The benchmarking of ACS salaries using independent data ensures the Society is competitive in attracting and retaining outstanding executives. The data from the most recent executive compensation study in 2020 continues to show that ACS executive compensation is at an appropriate, competitive level.

Consistent with the IRS instructions, the following explains the compensation information reported in various columns of Schedule J of the 2022 Form 990:

Part I asks general questions regarding compensation practices and the Society answered these questions according to its current practices in 2022. Required supplemental information related to social club dues are disclosed in Part III of Schedule J.

Part II provides information for each of the ACS 2022 officers, key employees, and five highest compensated employees (not included in either previous category) whose total annual compensation is greater than $150,000 and whose names are listed on Form 990, Part VII, Section A, line 1a.

Column A lists the names and titles of the persons who must be listed in Part II of Schedule J.

Column B includes the breakdown of reportable compensation as reported in Box 5 of the listed person's IRS Form W-2 for 2022. Schedule J requires that total W-2 wages be broken out into its component parts. These include base compensation, bonus & incentive compensation, and other reportable compensation. Base compensation includes the base salary and paid leave less pretax deductions such as employee contributions to flexible spending accounts, health insurance plan premiums, dental benefit plan premiums, vision benefit plan premiums and employee parking. Bonus

& incentive compensation includes bonuses and incentive compensation paid. Other reportable compensation include life insurance premiums, which represents the imputed cost of coverage for life insurance provided by ACS in excess of $50,000; and long-term disability insurance.

NOTE: The salary increases and incentive payments for the Chief Executive Officer, officers, top management officials, and key employees in 2022 were based on the 2021 performance year and were reviewed and approved by the Committee on Executive Compensation and the ACS Board of Directors. The Compensation Committee and the Board voted on these increases and incentives which were documented in the minutes from the corresponding meetings. The salary increase and incentive payment for the Chief Executive Officer were also reviewed by a Subcommittee of the ACS Board's Executive Committee – the Committee to Review the Executive Director (CRED). The written performance reviews and related documentation created by CRED are provided to the Committee members and the ACS Board of Directors. Salary increases for 2022 for ACS executives were processed in the first quarter 2023.

Column C includes amounts accrued to the individual under the ACS qualified defined contribution retirement plan in 2022.

Column D Nontaxable benefits includes ACS contributions for health, dental, vision, and life insurance premiums; disability insurance premiums; and postretirement health coverage.

As described above, “total compensation” is comprised of many categories, including such items as incentive pay, insurance benefits, and pension and retirement benefits. Thus, an executive’s total compensation is greater than his or her base salary, and the total varies from year to year.

We appreciate your interest in seeking accurate information on this important topic. Your questions or comments about this information can be directed to the ACS Chief Executive Officer or to the Chair, ACS Board of Directors.