INDUSTRY MATTERS

Information, insights, and advice for ACS industry members

May 28, 2020

PPG's EVP Tim Knavish reports on considerations for opening company labs, how digitization is driving business decisions in many areas at PPG, and the qualities he most values in company employees.

Tara Kennedy Griffiths discusses her ascent up the career ladder at Hershey's – it involves, among other things, being open to new challenges, a willingness to relocate, and a commitment to obtain additional education.

Meanwhile, back on the 'farm', Brad Justice, CEO, Soil Metrics, introduces us to a startup that uses computational modeling to generate and forecast greenhouse gas inventories in soil systems. In addition, he shares some startup tips he has learned along the way.

Finally, in this job market, effective networking is as important now as it has ever been. Learn how to do it better in our weekly LinkedIn Learning summary.

QUOTABLE

"An mRNA vaccine has huge advantages over a traditional one. Because it can be made directly from the genetic code of the virus, it can be invented and entered into clinical trials in a matter of weeks, rather than months or years. But there's a big downside: No one has ever successfully made one."
