Information, insights, and advice for ACS industry members

January 7, 2021

One of our ACS Career Consultants, Bill Carroll, has some thoughts on how to handle a boss who plays favorites – particularly when you don't fall into the favorite's camp.

DuPont's Christine McInnis shares many reflections on her career to-date. They include her thoughts on how the lines between industry and academia are blurring, some important learnings from her two internships, a very practical motivation for her volunteer work, and what she did to earn her Girl Scout Gold Award.

An early career chemist, Eugenia Narh Baawuo of DeWolf Chemical, explains how her career in cosmetic chemistry/personal care has evolved, and how her choice of mentors has evolved along with it.

Frankie Wood-Black, in keeping with the season, has some safety-related New Year's resolutions to share with you.

To wrap things up, for those interested in transitioning from the bench into some other role, Christina Bodurow, Vice President, Global Regulatory Affairs, Data Sciences, Safety & Regulatory, IQVIA, advises to think about credentials you may need to obtain to secure the desired position.

MORE FROM ACS

2021 Heroes of Chemistry Award Nominations Open Now Through Feb. 1!

Nominations for the ACS Heroes of Chemistry Awards are now open through February 1, 2021! The Heroes of Chemistry Award is one of the highest honors the ACS gives to industrial chemists, recognizing teams whose work and research led to the development of successfully commercialized products benefitting humankind. Any private or publicly owned for-profit company may nominate a team of chemists or allied scientists who played a vital role in the research and development of a commercial product that has had an impact on the welfare and progress of humanity. Nominating companies may choose to include individuals from other companies, government or academic labs, incubators, or other organizations as members of the teams they nominate. Former employees are also eligible to be included in the nomination. Celebrate your company's hard work and success in innovation - apply now!
